

TOEFL Independent Speaking questions – Preference

Here are sample TOEFL IBT speaking questions and answer preference questions.

Q.1. There are many different approaches to academic studies, and all of them have specific benefits. Do you prefer to study for tests in a group, or to study alone? Include details and examples to support your explanation.

I like to study for my examinations on my own.

This is how I feel for two reasons.

Firstly, I will be able to concentrate solely on what I need to study. Since everyone has their own weak points, we may end up spending a lot of time addressing those points, even if most of the other members are good in those areas.

When we work alone, on the other hand, we may concentrate solely on our own weaknesses, allowing us to get the highest potential exam result.

Moreover, I'm easily distracted, which may be problematic while studying in a group setting.

For example, last year, I was researching for a midterm test with a group of classmates. Rather than studying, we spent most of our time talking about music and sports. As a result, my exam scores were quite low.

Q.2. Some people like to watch television news programs every day, while others like to watch them only now and then. Which do you prefer? Include details and examples to support your explanation.

I would much rather watch the news only on rare occasions. This is because of two reasons.

To begin with, spending too much time watching the evening news makes me really uneasy. For example, if I hear about a new battle or tragedy every day of the week, I become melancholic and find it difficult to function in my day-to-day life.

Second, I believe that daily news viewing is a waste of time. For example, if I watch a news program for an hour daily, I will simply not have enough time to accomplish other things. For instance, ever since I quit watching the evening news, I find that I have more time to complete all of my school tasks.

TOEFL Independent Speaking questions – Agree or Disagree

TOEFL agree or disagree questions generally present with a statement, and ask candidates whether they agree or disagree with the statement.

Q.1. Do you agree or disagree with the following statement? Children should help their parents with household chores as soon as they are old enough. Use details and examples in your response.

I believe that allowing children to help with home duties as soon as they are old enough is a fantastic concept.

First and foremost, this may teach youngsters some really useful skills that will serve them well later in life. When I was a youngster, for example, I was in charge of making breakfast for my younger brother every day before we went to school. This experience served me well later in my life when I moved away for university. There, I was able to prepare my own healthy meals instead of depending on fast food joints like my peers.

Secondly, when parents and children work together on domestic duties, they get an opportunity to bond. They can converse while doing tasks like washing dishes or making food, and the kids may open up about what's happening in their life.

Q.2. Do you agree or disagree with the following statement? It is better for children to have teachers who are young, even if they are inexperienced.

I believe that having young professors, even if they are inexperienced, is beneficial for kids.

To begin with, youthful instructors are better able to relate to their students. In terms of actual interests and pop-cultural understanding, they just have a great deal in common with them. As a result, they have an easier time connecting the classroom subject to the students' everyday life. This can make the learning process more fun for the students.

Secondly, I personally find young instructors to be less intimidating. In my experience, older instructors are more critical of their students' mistakes than their younger counterparts. This may cause students to be apprehensive, and as a result, they may be reluctant to ask doubts in class—which in the long run will affect their learning process.

TOEFL Independent Speaking Questions – Description and Explanation

This question format includes certain daily topics on which you need to provide your opinion with details.

Q.1. Some companies have rules that forbid employees from using personal cell phones during working hours. Do you think this is a good idea? Why or why not? Use specific reasons and examples to support your answer.

I don't think it is a good idea for companies to prohibit employees from using their phones during business hours, because of two reasons.

To begin with, our mobile phones are the fastest means by which we can communicate with others.

So, if there is an emergency at home, the news would most probably be conveyed to us through our phones. And, of course, we'd like to know about emergencies as quickly as possible. If a worker is worried about being disconnected from his loved ones throughout the day, then there is a good chance that he may start looking for jobs that allow him to use his phone, which would be disastrous for the company.

Second, I believe that personal phones have the potential to increase our workplace atmosphere.

Making a brief phone call or looking at a social

Q.2. Nowadays, some people use extreme methods, including surgery, to change their appearance. They do this because they want to look more attractive. Do you think this is a good idea? Support your answer with details and examples.

I think getting surgery to change your look is a terrific idea. This is how I feel for two reasons.

First and foremost, by changing our appearance through plastic surgery, we will be able to develop the confidence to face any social situation. After all, self-confidence comes only when you are comfortable in your skin, and sometimes an aesthetic surgery with that!! Secondly, if we are unhappy with the outcome of our operation, we can always reverse it. I mean, plastic surgery is so inexpensive these days that if you get an operation and it doesn't look good, you can easily have another treatment done. For example, I've changed the shape of my nose three times already, and the cost to me has been modest.
